From the General Manager

2024: A year of great change and growth at Ball State Public Media

Ball State Public Media has taken bold strides this year – all of which were made possible by our generous and committed donors. One gift in particular helped us renew Indiana Public Radio (IPR), launching The Note 89.5, our new arts and classical music station. For years, we've heard your requests for more classical music, and we've responded. The Note is a true reflection of our commitment to you – taking note of your feedback and turning it into a reality, all made possible through a generous gift from one donor who wanted to make a big difference.

With this change, we also had the chance to reimagine our news service on IPR. Now, as an all-news and information station, IPR brings you a world of perspectives – from local stories to national news via NPR, as well as the global reach of the BBC and CBC. The new IPR is a powerhouse of knowledge for the endlessly curious.

Celebrating arts and culture, this year also saw the debut of IPR's Pop of Culture, a weekly program and podcast celebrating local creators and the vibrant arts scene in our region. This show quickly became a fan favorite, receiving national recognition and bringing the best of our cultural community to the forefront. Support from the Indiana Arts Commission, Psi Iota Xi, and Indiana Public Broadcasting Stations has been key to its success. Its impact on arts organizations and artists is already clear through increased attendance and interest from the local community.

Our Public Media Accelerator fellowship program continues to grow while empowering the next generation. Our fall 2024 cohort is the largest yet and is hard at work on a campus-wide awareness campaign for Ball State Public Media, in addition to their other responsibilities. These talented students – our next generation of public media professionals – have nearly doubled our staff, infusing energy and fresh ideas into everything we do.

In 2024, we expanded our commitment to early childhood education through our Ready to Learn program, hosting more than 30 sessions across the region. Working alongside partners like the Muncie Children's Museum and Dora's Daycare, we engaged more than 1,200 parents, caregivers and children, helping prepare our youngest community members for school success through fun and interactive sessions.

We say it often, but it's never been truer – we couldn't do this without you. Thanks to your continued support, 2024 was a year of innovation and growth, and we're just getting started.

Sincerely,

Dr. Phil Hoffman
Assistant Dean of Media and General Manager
Ball State Public Media

IPR Holiday Radio Drama

A Chris-Mystery 2: The Case of the Missing Missus is an original production written for IPR and staged live in front of an audience and broadcast live. It was set and performed by a cast and crew consisting of community and BSU volunteers, actors, musicians, sound effects artists, audio engineers, and show runners. The show was also taped and recorded for rebroadcast on IPR and BSPBS, with support from BSPBS video crew and opening credits provided by a Ball State professor.

Produced in partnership with the College of Communication, Information and Media, this year’s season offered a diverse and informative lineup, highlighting BSU’s engagement with the community and its commitment to student success.

Host Ball State President Geoffrey S. Mearns spoke with a diverse line-up of guests in 2024 to discuss topics including: heart healthy partnernships; student designers serving the community; an innovative childcare facility; student athletes striving for excellence on and off the field; how arts and culture enriches the community; and sharing the stage at Muncie Civic Theatre.

Local Radio Programs

IPR News

Every weekday, IPR airs approximately 30 minutes of live and recorded newscast content during drive time. All Things Considered host and reporter Stephanie Wiechmann, Morning Edition host Stan Sollars, and reporter Thomas Ouellette continued to cover regional, county, and municipal issues through their reporting in an area with few local news outlets. State and regional news partnership with Indiana Public Broadcasting Stations (IPBS) continues to support IPR's diverse news sources.

State Government Debates, Speeches and Election Coverage

IPR continued to keep our listeners connected with state government by airing live coverage of events including the governor's State of the State address, various NPR special coverage events relevant to our region--including the State of the Union--and election night results.

The Facing Project

The Facing Project with host J.R. Jamison continued to build empathy and shared experiences through telling peoples' stories, and this year, the production continued its ongoing monthly featuring interviews that add insight to the topics explored in each episode's set of stories. Topics explored include food insecurity, bringing people together across party lines to pass landmark criminal justice reform, searching for peace on a divided Cyprus, and the art of writing to connect. In 2024, the show expanded to one-hour episodes every week.

Classroom to Career: Work Based Learning for Indiana's Students

Educators in Indiana are using innovative approaches to work-based learning to help prepare students for the careers of tomorrow. This documentary from Ball State PBS and Regional Educational Laboratory (REL) Midwest highlights the benefits of work-based learning for Indiana's students and employers.

Through the stories of learners, educators, and leaders, the documentary spotlights three models of work-based learning in Indiana district--two rural and one urban--as well as practices the districts are using to strengthen their programs and learner outcomes.

Education & Engagement

Be My Neighbor Day

In June, Ball State PBS hosted the 7th annual Be My Neighbor Day at Inspire Academy in Muncie, Ind. Daniel Tiger was the special guest star for a beautiful day in the neighborhood celebrating kindness, caring and getting to know our neighbors. This special neighborhood hosted 25 local non-profit organizations that offered interactive activities, crafts, snacks and information about their organizations and services. Patchwork's live music created a fun atmosphere for dancing with Daniel Tiger. Nearly 300 books were distributed to the 287 kids and families in attendance. This annual event continues to provide a meaningful opportunity for the community to connect, learn and play.

Learning Neighborhood

Learning Neighborhood is an innovative model of community engagement. Through the 2020–2025 Ready To Learn grant, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and Ball State PBS provide resources that support intergenerational learning and skill development for children in literacy, critical thinking, and collaborative problem solving, while providing opportunities to explore “world of work” knowledge and skills in age-appropriate ways.

Guided by our mission to connect people to educational experiences and trusted stories, Ball State PBS and local partners provide parents, educators, families and caregivers access to a comprehensive set of touchpoints, content, and learning resources to encourage the sustained use and impact of the Ready To Learn Initiative. In addition to our on-the-ground work, we reach a large audience with Ready To Learn content over-the-air and through the PBS KIDS app.

Local Impact

BSPBS Ready To Learn workshops and outreach events have reached over 1,200 parents, caregivers, and children in Delaware County this year.

“I believe learning should be hands-on and interactive.
Most young children learn much better by doing.
Play is learning for kids (and adults!)”

–Ashley Mann, Community Education Manager

Family and Community Learning Events

This series of workshops engages families in hands-on learning utilizing PBS KIDS media. Designed for families with children ages 3-8, the workshops use guided play to introduce both kids and grown-ups to exciting digital and tangible tools that support the development of science inquiry and engineering design practices and literacy. The workshops aim to foster collaboration, communication, and fun among family members while reinforcing grown-ups' confidence and comfort to guide their children's learning.

Keeping Local Journalism Strong

60%
INCREASE IN LOCAL STORIES ON IPR IN 2024 vs. 2023

In an era of newspaper and news media consolidation, Ball State Public Media continues its work to alleviate the risk of our region becoming a news desert.

In 2023, Ball State Public Media partnered with Ball State Daily News, a student-led newspaper covering Ball State University, Delaware County and its environs, providing valuable local reporting to our audience. In 2024, Ball State Public Media continued building on its partnerships with student journalists to include the work of NewsLink Indiana, Delaware County’s only nightly newscast newscast in BSPM broadcasts and digital outlets. These partnerships support our continued service to the east-central Indiana community without substantial overhead while creating unique opportunities for future news professionals.

Additionally, Indiana Public Radio created and filled a reporter/producer position to focus on Anderson, Indiana, and Madison County. Thomas Ouellette, a graduate of the University of South Florida, joined IPR in April of 2024.

Our News Partners

The Daily News

The Ball State Daily News is the national award-winning, on-campus student newspaper at Ball State University, located in Muncie, Indiana. This independent news organization's mission is to provide the campus and Delaware County community with breaking news and accurate, timely information while giving student journalists professional opportunities while working toward their degrees.

The print edition of the newspaper is published every Thursday during the academic year. The newspaper is available, free to students, at locations across campus and has a circulation of 10,000.

IPBS

Indiana Public Broadcasting Stations, Inc. (IPBS) is a not-for-profit association of nine NPR radio stations and eight PBS television stations that serve as trusted resources for news, educational programming and entertainment in the Hoosier state. IPBS member stations work together to deliver free and accessible programming over the air, online, and in person. They reach 95% of Indiana's population and more than 2.5 million Hoosiers consume IPBS content on a weekly basis.

NewsLink Indiana

NewsLink Indiana is Delaware County's only nightly newscast. It is a student-run publication, with live shows Monday-Thursday each weeknight at 9 p.m. and a morning show on Friday mornings. NewsLink Indiana's coverage is broken up into news, sports, digital, and weather while giving students professional experience as anchors, reporters, producers, and multimedia journalists.

Radio Expansion

More News, More Music

The IPR community asked us to add more news and more music to our current schedule. On Oct. 28, IPR expanded both!

On that day, Indiana Public Radio debuted a revamped schedule featuring new shows and extended hours of news coverage, in-depth interviews, cultural deep-dives, and diverse music programming.

The new IPR schedule can be heard on 92.1 FM Muncie, 90.9 FM Marion and 91.1 FM Hagerstown/New Castle.

Also on Oct. 28, IPR launched 89.5 The Note. IPR's current classical music offerings move to WBSB 89.5 FM Anderson, along with a new array of programs to satisfy classical music fans.

The Note is a 24/7 station featuring music and commentary, live and hosted all day from American Public Media's Classical 24 (C24) service. Plus, classical music programs from the current IPR schedule like Sunday Afternoon Classics, Chicago Symphony Orchestra and Fiesta! will have a new home.

The Note can be heard on 89.5 FM.

Both IPR and The Note can be streamed at indianapublicradio.org and the Ball State Public Media app.

Radio Expansion

A Launch to Remember

We celebrated the launch of our new station, 89.5 The Note, and IPR's new program schedule on November 2 at Cornerstone Center for the Arts in Muncie, Ind.

The event was a big success, filled with live music, games, giveaways, and craft beer from Four Day Ray.

We were honored to welcome Stephen Thompson from NPR Music as our special guest. His Q&A with Michelle Kinsey and interaction with local public media fans added an extra special touch.

We are excited for this new chapter, and grateful for the support from our community!

Operations

Engineering and Technology

In 2022, Ball State Public Media underwent an engineering study to assess the status, quality, broadcast area and technological needs of our operations. The study identified multiple issues with outdated equipment in our Marion, Hagerstown and Cowan facilities. Indiana Public Radio is broadcasting on transmitters 10 years beyond their expected lifespan.

In early 2024, we received a significant financial contribution which allowed for the replacement of one of three transmitters in acute need. We prioritized upgrading 89.5 to maximize the impact of this improved technology. Our facility on Cowan Road in Muncie underwent a significant upgrade this year. New equipment was installed to transmit 89.5 from a tower in Anderson, Ind. This change allowed for the launch of our new station, 89.5 The Note, increased the station's broadcast area and eliminated future rental fees for the tower that previously housed the equipment.

In 2022-2023, we also completed a great deal of the needed work to prepare WIPB for the eventual shift to ATSC 3.0 broadcasting. While this implementation in the U.S. is rolling out slowly, we anticipate that eventually all stations will move to ATSC 3.0 broadcasting, which provides superior video and audio quality, and allows broadcasters to merge data delivery and create opportunities for interactive elements within broadcasts. Currently about 70% of the U.S. population has implemented ATSC 3.0.

This report card at right outlines the status of each of Ball State Public Media's crucial facilities and equipment.

WBSW 90.9 Tower

Emergency Alert System

The Emergency Alert System (EAS) is a national public warning system commonly used by state and local authorities to deliver important emergency information, such as weather and AMBER alerts, to affected communities. EAS Participants – radio and television broadcasters, cable systems, satellite radio and television providers, and wireline video providers – deliver local alerts on a voluntary basis, but they are required to provide the capability for the President to address the public during a national emergency. (from FCC.GOV)

Ball State PBS Master Control

Location: E.F. Ball Communication Building, Ball State University, Muncie, IN

Status: Good

- TV Master Control was upgraded 2022-2023 for the first time in 18 years
- Planned implementation of ATSC 3.0 cost is approximately $200,000

IPR Master Control

Location: David Letterman Communication and Media Building, Ball State University, Muncie, IN

Status: Fair

- IPR’s EAS, Traffic, and Automation systems were refactored to expand service to two broadcast radio programs: Indiana Public Radio and 89.5 The Note. This included an upgrade to a new internet stream processing system to improve the sound and reliability of the web streams.
- IPR’s Master Control studios are in need of new audio systems to improve the reliability of production and live broadcasts; the existing Axia systems were installed in 2006-2007.

Public Media Accelerator

The Future of Public Media Starts Here

30%

INCREASE IN STUDENTS

2024 vs. 2022

The Public Media Accelerator (PMX) program gives students the opportunity to work at Indiana Public Radio and Ball State PBS while exploring careers in public media.

Students work with professionals in a variety of disciplines, including audio and video production, digital marketing, community engagement, membership, news, animation and graphic design.

In August, BSPM welcomed the largest PMX cohort to date with 13 fellows. In addition to hands-on participation on BSPM projects, each cohort devises a special project relevant to BSPM's mission. The student-led initiative lets them explore collaborative, practical project management while supporting the work of the stations and service to our community.

In 2024, the PMX cohort produced an educational campaign featuring coverage of the total solar eclipse in April. The 2024-25 cohort is currently developing an engagement campaign to connect the University community with Ball State Public Media's programs and events. "What I love about this year's project, is it was the idea of PMX students," Terry said. "Most people on campus have no idea that there is a radio and TV station in the David Letterman Building that broadcast to a half dozen counties across the area that has a broad reach and a sizeable audience. The idea was to find a way to increase that awareness, to get students to know this resource is out there."
